EPP Group Public Hearing

"Who pays for Data Protection?"

Thursday, March 31st

9:00 - 12:30 h

ASP 3 E 2

European Parliament, Brussels

Focus of the Hearing:

In 1995 the EU has set a milestone in establishing data protection principles across all EU-member states by implementing the Directive 95/46/EG on the protection of personal data.

Since 1995 however, things have changed dramatically and at enormous speed - we are now living in the so called "digital age", where personal data is flowing and is processed all the time. Needless to say, that the 95-directive urgently needs to be adapted to the new technical challenges and the larger amount of personal data that is processed by numerous actors in today's society and economy.

Accordingly, the commission has published a Communication on the revision of the directive in November 2010 and we are awaiting a proposal for a new legislative instrument this summer.

The issue of data-protection is a horizontal issue that affects numerous actors and all sections of the economy. Just to name a few, citizens, consumers, advertisers, internet and telecom providers, insurances, content-provider, social networks, police- and justice authorities, government bodies and data protection authorities, they all are affected by new regulations.

The EPP thus thinks that the debate should take all interests and all stakeholders into account in order to achieve a balanced view on the amendment of the directive. Nowadays, the debate seems to be narrowly focussed on the perspective of consumer protection and the safeguarding of a free internet. We think there is more to discuss!
